ABRI is soliciting nominations for the ABRI Excellence in Business Studies Awards 2020 in the following categories:

1) Best PhD Student Paper Award
2) Best Junior Faculty Paper Award
3) Business Impact Award

The Awards aim to recognize the outstanding work by our scientific staff, acknowledge their contribution to science, business, and society, and foster and encourage our excellent junior talent to become leading researchers in their field of expertise.

Best PhD Student Paper Award recognizes the outstanding academic work of PhD students. Both published articles and papers currently in press that capture original work by a PhD student can be nominated for this award. The papers can be both conceptual and empirical. Only papers by current PhD students and recent graduates (less than one year) are eligible for nomination. Both nominations and self-nominations are accepted for this award.

Best Junior Faculty Paper Award recognizes the outstanding academic work by promising Assistant and Associate Professors. Only papers published in leading business and management journals that capture original work by researchers associated with ABRI can be nominated for this award. The papers can be both conceptual and empirical. Only papers published within the last 12 months and papers currently in press are eligible for nomination. Both nominations and self-nominations are accepted for this award.

Business Impact Award recognizes the outstanding work of ABRI colleagues generating impact on business (processes, practices, services, leadership, etc.). Nominations can be made in form of a (recommendation or motivation) letter. Both nominations and self-nominations are accepted for this award.
