UPCOMING EVENTS

Count down: application deadline Research MSc programme

Per this week students with a Dutch degree will only have one week left to apply to the newly accredited Research MSc Business in Society. We can start in September when enough students enroll for it! So please contact your best third year (international) bachelors students who are curious and analytical, and have an interest in research, and make them aware of the Research Master!

The new programme will become the main way of getting into a (3-year) PhD position and allows students to find their own specialization within business administration, but also try to broaden their view. It is comparable to the international MPhil degrees (but in the Netherlands we have MSc) and what makes us special is that it is a joint degree (from both VU and UvA), the 'flavour' of Business in Society and emphasis on theory development. More information can be found on our website or by contacting Maura Soekijad.

NEWS

FEWEB Student best Student Entrepreneur of the World
Steinar Henskes, student at the Faculty of Economics and Business Administration has been elected the best student-entrepreneur of the world in Washington D.C. The company of the 24 year old student produces lasers that chase away birds from airfields.
Henskes won 20,000 US Dollar (18,500 Euro). The competition of Entrepreneurs' Organization (EO) Global Student Entrepreneur Awards (GSEA) consisted of 2000 student entrepreneurs from 38 different countries. “It’s a dream come true” Henskes said after his election. His company, founded in 2012 is active in 52 countries. At Amsterdam Schiphol Airport and London City Airport his lasers are being used to deter birds in an animal friendly way. Henskes founded his company in collaboration with Yes!Delft, the entrepreneurs centre of Delft University of Technology. The Executive Board of VU University has declared to be very proud on Henskes.

ADRIA co-organized anti-bullying campaign leads to petition to Dutch politicians
The campaign “Stop Workplace Bullying” (Dutch: “Stop pesten op het werk!”), which has been co-organized by VU University’s Aubrey Daniels Research Institute for Behavior Analysis (ADRIA), has led to a petition that will be handed over to Dutch politicians in The Hague. ADRIA has been active for a longer time to combat workplace bullying.

The Ministry of Social Affairs and Employment will start this year with an information campaign, called “Workplace Bullying”. The petition appeals to political parties to help bullied employees, to point out the responsibilities of companies to adopt anti bullying measures, to aid prevention of bullying and to prevent new incidents.

In collaboration with the anti-bullying foundation Stichting Pesten op de Werkvloer and law firm RWV Advocaten, ADRIA, launched in October 2014 a practical step-by-step plan against bullying in the workplace. During a recent seminar about this topic, the question “how to change existing business culture by applying principles from behavioral therapy” was discussed. The conclusion was that this can be achieved best not by punishing, but by reinforcing desired behavior. ADRIA director Marius Rietdijk said the following about this: “Bullying empowers the bully and renders the target helpless. With our practical advices bullying targets regain influence.”

Best Paper Award for Hans Vermaak and Leon de Caluwé
Hans Vermaak and Leon de Caluwé have received a Best Paper Award from the Organizational Behavior Division of the Academy of Management. Papers receiving this award belong to the top 10% of all the submitted papers. ‘Creating a colorful model of change: a case study of theory development’ describes how the authors, almost twenty years ago, came up with a meta-theory of change and how that theory has developed over time. They also make suggestions for how to bridge the gap between academia and practice more effectively.

This meta-theory of change is now referred to as the ‘color model’. In the paper, the authors look back on how one creative idea took on many manifestations, became a robust theory and is now widely used. Vermaak and De Caluwé feel very honoured by the award. “This is a great acknowledgement for our work on the understanding of theory development.” In the paper, they describe how new theories often come from tension, and the importance of chance and context. “We hope to give some guidance to other researchers developing theories, especially those who operate intensively in practice.”

SERVUS is delighted to announce their forthcoming Servant-Leadership symposium on May 4th, 2015, 13:15-18:00 hrs in the Main Building of VU. The symposium Servant-Leadership in Crisis Situations is the 11th in an annual symposium series organised by SERVUS. The symposium is a meeting place for international Master students in Business Administration, professionals and practitioners to strengthen the link between theory and business practice. This event with its focus on Crisis Situations goes beyond the cognitive approach to explore our inner strengths and vulnerabilities within people and organisations. How do people cope with crisis in their working life and through experiences of vulnerability develop personal strengths? An organisational crisis such as unemployment, IT failure, closure of a department or clashing corporate cultures after a merger, may turn out to become an opportunity. Servant-Leadership is expressed in both handling (the prevention of) a crisis and at the same time creating a durable corporate culture where people feel safe. For companies this implies matching individual and organisational needs while serving employees through all seasons of business and personal life.
This symposium brings together cutting-edge thinkers and practitioners across disciplines, leveraging the global human needs to learn, serve and lead in their unique way. The symposium will include keynote presentations, workshops and a plenary debate to shed light on the gentle art of serving and leading, and how leaders can serve to acknowledge each other’s fragility and strengths. In dialogue with the audience, we aim to explore leadership dilemmas that arise across cultural orientations, responding to the needs of the other in times of crisis. For more information and registration (before April 24) please click here.
