Best Student Paper Award for Joost Berkhouts' research on Google PageRank

Joost Berkhout (ABRI PhD) won the Best Student Paper Award at the International Workshop on Discrete Event Systems (WODES) 2016 in Xi’an (China) with his paper "Google’s PageRank Algorithm for Ranking Nodes in General Networks". In this paper the main driving force behind Google's search engine is generalised and analysed.

Joost: "The award is a real honor and a recognition of our research. Furthermore, it is a confirmation that our current research direction has a lot of potential."

Besides being the main mechanism behind ranking the web via Google's search engine, Google PageRank is often used as tool in general network analyses (e.g., think of social networks or road networks). The generalized ranking methodology proposed in this research ensures more careful rankings of nodes that are of transient nature, a common feature in many realistic datasets. The impact of the new ranking is illustrated via a real-life social network of Wikipedia users and administrators.

Joost Berkhout is an ABRI PhD candidate under the supervision of Prof. Bernd Heidergott (Econometrics and Operations Research) and currently he is mainly working on the "Markov Chain Theory and Applications".

ABRI Barbecue closure of another very successful year
As a closure of this past academic year, on Tuesday, June 14, ABRI office organized its annual barbecue for the ABRI research community (and beyond).

The barbecue was a nice occasion to reflect on all the great projects, high-impact publications, new educational programmes and other achievements of the last year, which all contributed to the recent excellent research assessment by the QANU committee.

The committee noted that “In terms of citation impact, the CWTS benchmark analysis shows VU (economics and business together) in 2nd place within the Netherlands and just outside of the top 10 of European benchmark institutes.” Regarding Amsterdam Business Research Institute (ABRI), the committee added: “the committee was very impressed with the excellence of the strategy, as well as with the outstanding leadership and team spirit in its execution.”

ABRI wishes everyone a great conference and holiday season!
